Covered by Adriane Grau Foster

The malleable metals marketplace is testing ASARCO's mettle. The company, a subsidiary of diversified mining firm Grupo México, is a leading miner, refiner, and smelter. Each year it produces around 600 million pounds of copper, 300 million pounds of zinc, and 20 million ounces of silver. ASARCO's mines are primarily in the southwestern US. The company also produces semi-finished copper products such as rod, cake, and billet and sulfuric acid as a by-product of the smelting process. Several of ASARCO's assets, including its 54% stake in Southern Peru Copper Corp. (SPCC), were sold to Grupo México in 2003 in an effort to improve ASARCO's financial picture.
